Acting on this information, Lawyer Roderick and Chief McKane instructed his policement to act as they did.

Lawyer Roderick also said that he would prove to the sanisfaction of the sury that Col. Bacon had concocted a scheme to throw discredit upon the election system of Gravesend Township by sending down a crown of burnship by sending through the streets to give the impression that the town was full of colonizers.

There was a general impression among those in court that the defense had before it a particularly hard task in breaking down the wall of damaging evidence which seemed to hem in the Concy Islaminier on every side.

Lawyer Roderick spent two hours in a tedious explanation of the manner of conducting elections in general and Gravesend elections in particular.

According to this description, the simple-minded residents of Gravesend cost their ballots on election day with the utmost decorum, and thought that what most decorum, and thought that what sever trouble might have occurred was the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of a conviction in the minds of the result of the

There was not a foot of standing room left in court when the afternoon session opened. McKane came into the court-room with his soft hat cocked jaunily ever his left ear. He took his seat bestle Lawyer lackus and waited patiently for his name to be called.

There was some delay after Justice Bartlett rook his seat, caused by the non-appearance of counsel for the prosecution. Finally everybody was ready and Lawyer Roderick called:

"Mr. McKane."

"Mr. McKane."

The Caar marched to the witness tand and took the oath with his back surned to the audience. The direct examination was begun by ex-Judge Troy. In answer to questions, McKane seld he was a resident of Sheepshead how. Gravesend; that he was fifty-one years old, was born in Ireiand and had lived in Gravesend since he was two years old. Continuing, the witness in answer to questions said that he had a family consisting of two boys and a girl.

"You are a Supervisor of Gravesend Township?" I believe.

"Yes; for sixteen years. I was relected each year without opposition. except once."

What is your business?"
"What is your business?"
"I was a builder until recently, when went into the real estate business."
Regarding his re-election to the office of supervisor. McKane said that after is fourth term he grew tired of the office, and asked that somebody else be shosen. His request was not granted.
